LIVING ON GILLIGAN'S ISLAND

“ Sit right back and you'll hear a tale—a tale of a fateful trip...”

I was sitting in an oil change and lube shop waiting room the other day and a TV was on with some classic TV shows. I was sitting there enjoying Dragnet and my mind drifted to all those classic shows I watched as a kid growing up. We had them memorized and then if that was not enough we watched Gilligan's Island everyday around lunchtime in college.

There were very few of these episodes that you could deem spiritually significant, but I do remember one. Gilligan had gotten his feelings hurt and decided to move away to the other side of the Island to live alone in a cave. Immediately, this became a miserable existence for Gilligan—he was all alone. But also miserable for everyone else on the island—one of their own was no longer among them, in fellowship with them...and there was a terrible void. They missed him at the dinner table. They missed his jokes, his laughter, his gentleness. They even missed his clumsy screw-ups. I think at one point in the episode they were sitting around the dinner table taking turns talking about the specific things they missed about him. So what did they do? I think it began with Skipper. He decided to leave the rest and go live with Gilligan so he wouldn't be alone. Then another person did the same. Then another. Until finally, all seven people were together again on the other side of the island in Gilligan's cave. In true spiritual community, we either make it together, or we don't make it...at least not in a healthy way.

Here's a great online Bible or concordance search for you to do when you have time. Look at all of the scriptures from Acts to Revelation in which you find the word “together” and see what early Christians did “together.” I think you might be amazed and called to deeper relationships!
